

FLPS and Sader Organize Event on Launching Sports Law Platform

Ladies and gentlemen, it is with great pleasure that I welcome two distinguished guests to our campus today: Jim Struman and Rosalia Ortega Pradillo. They have graciously accepted our invitation to share their insights on sports law.

Firstly, let me introduce Jim Struman, a renowned sports lawyer who brings a wealth of experience in representing top athletes, teams, and leagues. Widely regarded as one of the leading experts in sports law, Jim has received numerous awards for his outstanding contributions to the field.

We are also honored to have Rosalia Ortega Pradillo with us, a highly esteemed arbitrator specializing in international sports law. With a profound understanding of the complex legal issues that surround sports, she has successfully represented clients in various sports, including soccer, tennis, and cycling. Her expertise in anti-doping regulations and governance of sports organizations is unparalleled.

The presence of Jim Struman and Rosalia Ortega Pradillo on our campus today exemplifies the significance of interdisciplinary learning and the value of bringing together professionals from different fields to share their expertise. By fostering this intellectual exchange, we strive to create an environment that encourages innovation, creativity, and the pursuit of knowledge.

I would like to extend a warm welcome to all of our students, faculty, and guests who have joined us here today. We sincerely hope that this discussion proves to be informative and thought-provoking, inspiring each of you to pursue your passions and interests with renewed purpose and determination.

Thank you all for joining us, and now let us shift our attention to what promises to be a fascinating and insightful discussion with Jim Struman and Rosalia Ortega Pradillo. We eagerly anticipate an engaging and enlightening conversation and hope that you thoroughly enjoy your time here at Notre Dame University.
