

Antoine K. Khalil

Associate Professor

O:B275

T:09.218950, Ext.2460

E:tkhalil@ndu.edu.lb

Biography

Antoine Khalil with over thirty-three years of teaching and academic experience has held all leadership posts in the Faculty of Business Administration and Economics throughout his career including first Dean of the School of Business (1987). He has held numerous top managerial positions throughout the university as a whole including founder and director of the Off Campus Program in North Lebanon (1990) and Director of the Student Affairs Office (1994). He was the Editor-in-Chief of the NDU Palma Review (1992). His diverse repertoire of courses extends from financial management for corporations to investment and banking. His managerial skills have been utilized at length at Notre Dame University (NDU) as exhibited through his membership in high level university committees, providing NDU sustained development and growth. He has prepared manuals, handbooks and documents for university and department policies and procedures.

In addition, to his academic experience he has been a business owner of T.G.I. SUNDAY'S, a fast food restaurant chain and American ice cream parlors and Grand Hotel Faraya. He has been involved as a consultant to many small businesses. Clients have frequently come to him for professional services in order to develop business plans, feasibility reports and proposals. He has developed many projects for the hospitality industry. He is quick to provide detailed and expert assessment for business start-ups and SWOT analyses for businesses and organizations with lengthy track records.

He has his M.B.A from the Lubin Graduate School of Business at Pace University, White Plains, New York and his B.A. from The Catholic University of America, Washington, DC.