

Diane Samrani

Senior Lecturer

O: FH 0.16

T: 09 218 950, Ext. 2402

E: dsamrani@ndu.edu.lb

Biography

Born in North Africa where my working parents met and conceived us, raised in Lebanon, educated in the UK, (in a university affiliated to an American university, Andrews University, Michigan), I embarked on my career whilst still working on my Masters in the UK. I taught English as a second language to multinational students coming from all over Europe and Scandinavia while still studying. I had the courage to fly to the Republic of China, Taiwan, upon completing my Masters and teaching English to Chinese of all ages. My journey did not end there. My experience began in the UK, including Taiwan, Egypt, Uganda and finally establishing myself in Lebanon. NDU welcomed me with open arms in 1994, and I am happy to say that I may have aged and changed status from married to divorced with a son whom I am utterly proud of, I still enjoy teaching with a passion. I hope my journey will end where I started 28 years ago. I would not be happier anywhere else but Notre Dame University.