

Translations of the Works of Bahā ud-Dīn Al-<sup>c</sup>Āmili

(Alphabetical Order)

➤ From Persian into Arabic:

1. The Cat and the Mouse (Gurbah va Mush), from the original Persian into Arabic, fable (religious criticism), published. In this work criticizes those who pretend to practice jurisprudence, whom he refers to as mutafaqqihīn (imposters on the science of fiqh), as well as imposters on Sufism. Translated and edited by Dalal Abbas. First edition, London – Beirut, Riyad Ar-Rayyes Publishers, 1996, 184 pages.

➤ From Arabic into French:

2. Summary of Arithmetic, Sommaire d'Arithmetique, (Khulāsāt-ul Ḥisāb), from the original Arabic into French, applied sciences, published. It is a summary of his previous book Baḥr-ul-Ḥisāb (The Sea of Arithmetic), and contains an introduction, ten chapters and a conclusion. It is considered one of al-Bahā'ī's most important works and contains nearly forty explanations. Published in Rome, 1864.

➤ From Arabic into German:

3. Summary of Arithmetic, (Khulāsāt-ul Ḥisāb), from the original Arabic into French, applied sciences, published. Translated by the Nesselman, the German Orietalist, and printed in Berlin, 1843.

➤ From Arabic into Persian:

4. Commentary on the Forty Narrations (Sharḥ-ul 'Arba'ina Ḥadīthan), from the original Arabic into Persian, applied sciences, published. Translated, during the life of the author, by Mohammad Bin Ali, known as Ibn Khatoun Al-<sup>c</sup>Āmili, in the year 1619, under the title of 'Arba'īn Sheikh Bahā'ī. The translation was published in Iran in 1955.

5. Summary of Arithmetic, (Khulāsāt-ul Ḥisāb), from the original Arabic into Persian, applied sciences, published. Translated into Persian by Mohammad Jawad Zihni Tahrani under the title of Al-Lubāb fi Sharḥ Khulāsat Al-Ḥisāb (The Pulp in Explaining the Summary of Arithmetic). The latest edition published in Iran was in 1980.

➤ From Persian into Arabic:

6. The Cat and the Mouse (Gurbah va Mush), from the original Persian into Arabic, fable (religious criticism), published. In this work criticizes those who pretend to practice jurisprudence, whom he refers to as mutafaqqihīn (imposters on the science of fiqh), as well as imposters on Sufism. Translated and edited by Dalal Abbas. First edition, London – Beirut, Riyad Ar-Rayyes Publishers, 1996, 184 pages.